Broken Toys.

I found my baby girl to-day Asleep upon the floor, The space around her little fortu-

With playthings scattered o'er-Her hands were nestled 'neath her chin

And one still firmly held A broken by whose novel charm As yet was undispelled.

There lingered still about the mouth And on the brow a trace

Of thought, half grieved and half perplexed As if the tiny face Already had begun to learn, The lock it was to wear

In years to come; I stooped to kiss Away the minsic care And as I laid her, still asleep Within her nest-like bed

And smoot hed the cradle's pillow for The little weary head I thought how we, of larger growth When tired of pains and joys

With that same look, fall fast salesp Amid our broken toys. And when the father, stooping takes The tired head to his breast And smooths the furrows from the brow

And bears us to our rest.

ARABELLA-on her tip toes on a chair, elutching convulsively at her skirts and and shricking : " Oh, Bridget! A mouse! A mouse! Come and earth it-quick." Bridget : " Shure mum there's no hurry. If this one gets away, I can eatch plenty more for ye, mum.'

The man who can see sermons in running brooks is most apt to go and look for them on Sandays when trout are biting. Don't judge a man by the silk umbrella he carries; he may just have left an alpaca one in

A MANUFACTURING wire worker man's advertisement invites the public to come and see his invisible wire tence. THE longest stretch of telegraph wire in the world is across the Kistun River, in India-the span being 6000 feet in length. CURIOUS EFFECTS OF A MIRAGE. - A Bedawin riding past us at full speed, carrying a long spear, was in eight for more than an hour and a half. He took all kinds of fantastic shapes, and as regards the distance, he was off at any moment; the best range-finder ever invented could not have localized him. At one time he was split into three, with a space of something that looked like a surface of shimmering water between each part -the legs of the camel dancing along over the plain without any-body attached to them, and high over them the body of the camel and rider flying through the air, and above them again the tuft of feathers surmounting his spear, looking like a bird in the air .- Keane's Journey to Me-ANOTHER TELEOLOGIST .- A Quidnane in Singa-

Quand Georges Dieu crucifera, Que Marc le ressuciters, Et que Saint Jean le portera,

Le fin du monde arrivera. The interpretation of which is that the final catastrophe will occur during some year when Good Friday falls on the Feast of St. George, (April 22ad) Easter Sunday, on St. Mark (April 24th) and Corpus Christi on St. John (June 24,) This consummation, it appears, will actually happen in 1886.

KING HUMBERT AT HOME.-Humbert the First is an early riser; in summer and winter be turns out at five o'clock in the mor ing. He spends his first hour of the day in reading; at six o'clock when the weather permits; he takes a ride on horseback, or inspects his stables, which are under the charge of the Marquis d'Origo. At nine o'clock the mail comes in, and His Majesty, in company with two old and faithful counsellors formerly in his father's service, sets himself at once to peruse its contents, and now the serious business of the day commences. As the clock of the Quirinal strikes ten he is ready for his private secretaries, General Medici and Count Vison, who appear and take their orders for the day. At eleven o'clock breakfast is served, after which the King devotes bimself to his family until one o'clock, when he begins his audiences. Anyone who wishes to speak to him on a matter of business is freely admitted. The King shakes hands with his visitor in English fashion when he enters the drawing-room and when he leaves. He offers his cigar case, and during the audience the King himself smokes and paces the room while he hears the business of his subjects. The audience lasts until four o'clock, and then His Majesty takes his daily walk, generally returning to the palace about six. The next hour he spends in the company of the Queen and the young Prince of Naples Dinner is served at seven o'clock, but the King partakes very lightly of this meal, believing that the stay of the day should be obtained at breakfast. At nine o'clock he goes to his study, and after devoting a couple of hours to his books, he retires for the night. Such are the daily habits of the King of Italy. In politics he is noted for his impartiality, and his universal popularity, notwithstanding the many conflicting parties in Italian society, is a proof of the satisfactory manner in which he governs his people. - Society.

The Effects of the Electric Light on

Vegetable Life. A full account of an interesting and extraordinary experiment recently made by Dr. Siemens, was brought by him before the British Association in the form of a paper on the subject. It appears that the idea had occurred to him whether plants and animals were alike in both requiring a regularly-recurring period of rest and darkness to promote their proper growth. To test this, he brought electric light to bear upon certain vegetables all through the night, for a considerable time, so that they should never be in darkness for a moment. He placed a lamp of 4,000 candle power inside a glass house of 2,318 cubit feet capacity, and suspended another like it over some sunk green houses. Lanterns of clear glass were placed round the lights, and they were then burnt continuously all night except on Sunday, the gardener, Mr. Buchanan, being presumably Scotch, and doubtful of the orthodoxy of the Creator in allowing the sun to shine on Sabbaths. The result was extraordinary. Peas which had been sown at the end of October produced a harvest of ripe fruit on the 16th of February. Raspherry stalks put into the house on the 16th of December produced ripe fruit on the 1st of March, and strawberny plants put in about the same time produced ripe fruit of excellent flavor and color on the 14th of February. Vines which broke on the 26th of December produced ripe grapes of stronger flavor than usual on the 10th of March. The cereals did not flourish under glass, the stalks proving too weak to bear the grain, but they flourish in the open air under the light. Dr. Siemen's conclusion is that sleep is not essential to the health of the product of the plant, though it may be essential, pending further experiment, to the growth in full strength of the plant itself.
